The novel's protagonist, Maria, is a young Mexican immigrant who comes to the United States in search of a better life. She finds work as a waitress in a small town in California, but she soon realizes that the American Dream is not all that it's cracked up to be. She is met with prejudice and discrimination, and she struggles to make ends meet.

As Maria's life spirals downward, she turns to drugs and alcohol to numb the pain. She loses her job, her apartment, and her friends. She becomes homeless and living on the streets.

One day, Maria meets a kind-hearted man named Tom. Tom takes Maria in and gives her a place to stay. He helps her get clean and sober, and he encourages her to go back to school. Maria starts to turn her life around, and she eventually finds a job and an apartment of her own.

However, Maria's past continues to haunt her. She is still plagued by memories of the abuse she suffered as a child, and she struggles to deal with the guilt and shame she feels over her addiction.
