Lahiri was born in London to Indian parents and raised in the United States. She first visited Italy as a college student and was immediately drawn to the country's beauty, culture, and food. After graduating from college, she moved to Italy to study Italian literature and eventually made the country her home.

In My Two Italies, Lahiri writes about her experiences of living in Italy as an outsider. She explores the challenges of learning a new language, adapting to a different culture, and forging new relationships. She also writes about the racism and discrimination she has faced as an Indian woman living in Italy.

Despite the challenges, Lahiri has come to love Italy and its people. She has found a home in the country and has built a life there. In My Two Italies, she writes about the beauty of Italy, its people, and its culture. She also writes about the ways in which Italy has changed her and shaped her identity.

My Two Italies is a beautifully written and deeply personal book that explores the complex relationship between identity, culture, and home. Lahiri's writing is both insightful and moving, and her story is sure to resonate with anyone who has ever felt like an outsider.
