Palmer, the charismatic and popular champion, was at the peak of his powers. Nicklaus, the young phenom, was just beginning his ascent to greatness. And Hogan, the legendary champion who had overcome adversity to become one of the game's most respected players, was looking to add to his already impressive legacy.

The three golfers clashed in a series of tournaments that included the Masters, the U.S. Open, and the British Open. Palmer won the Masters and the British Open, while Nicklaus won the U.S. Open. Hogan finished in the top 10 in all three tournaments.

The 1960 season was a watershed moment in golf history. It was the year that the game truly became a global sport, and it was the year that Palmer, Nicklaus, and Hogan cemented their places as three of the greatest golfers of all time.

Arnold Palmer

Arnold Palmer was born in 1929 in Latrobe, Pennsylvania. He began playing golf at an early age, and he quickly showed a natural talent for the game. Palmer won his first major championship, the Masters, in 1958. He would go on to win seven major championships in his career, including the Masters four times.

Palmer was one of the most popular golfers of all time. He was known for his aggressive style of play and his charismatic personality. Palmer helped to popularize golf in the United States, and he is credited with helping to create the modern game of golf.

Jack Nicklaus

Jack Nicklaus was born in 1940 in Columbus, Ohio. He began playing golf at the age of 10, and he quickly became one of the most promising young golfers in the country. Nicklaus won his first major championship, the U.S. Amateur, in 1959. He would go on to win 18 major championships in his career, including the Masters six times.

Nicklaus is considered by many to be the greatest golfer of all time. He is known for his consistent play and his ability to win in all types of conditions. Nicklaus is also one of the most respected golfers in the world, and he has been a mentor to many young golfers.

Ben Hogan

Ben Hogan was born in 1912 in Dublin, Texas. He began playing golf at the age of 11, and he quickly showed a talent for the game. Hogan won his first major championship, the PGA Championship, in 1946. He would go on to win nine major championships in his career, including the Masters twice.

Hogan is considered by many to be one of the greatest golfers of all time. He is known for his precise iron play and his ability to overcome adversity. Hogan was involved in a near-fatal car accident in 1949, but he returned to golf and won four more major championships after the accident.
