Grandin was born in 1947, and she was diagnosed with autism when she was two years old. As a child, she struggled with social interactions and communication. She was often bullied by her peers, and she had difficulty understanding the social cues that other children seemed to pick up on naturally.

Despite her challenges, Grandin was a bright and curious child. She loved to read, and she was fascinated by animals. She spent hours observing the animals on her family's farm, and she developed a deep understanding of their behavior.

In high school, Grandin began to excel in science and math. She went on to earn a bachelor's degree in psychology from Franklin Pierce College, and a master's degree and doctorate in animal science from the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign.

After completing her education, Grandin began her career as a professor of animal science at Colorado State University. She quickly became a leading expert in the field of animal behavior, and she has published over 60 books and articles on the subject.

In addition to her work as a scientist, Grandin is also a passionate advocate for people with autism. She has lectured extensively on the subject, and she has written several books about her own experiences. She is a strong believer in the power of education and early intervention, and she works tirelessly to improve the lives of people with autism.

Surfing Savant is an inspiring memoir that offers a unique perspective on the challenges and triumphs of living with autism. Grandin's story is a reminder that anything is possible with hard work and determination.
